

CAMPFIRES & SCIENCE

Competition: Future Knowledge And Wikipedia

‘Science for All’ is working with the Wikimedia Foundation at a special event on 24th August.

We’re asking for submissions from people aged 15-24 to enter a competition to share their views about Wikipedia.

You can submit either a mini-essay (200 words max) or a short audio or video recording (under 3 minutes) answering some of the following questions:

- How do you use Wikipedia now?
- What would make you use Wikipedia more?
- What do you think Wikipedia and other Wikimedia projects should do in the future?

Enter the competition

How: Email your entry to info@scienceforall.world

When: Before August 22nd

What next? Winners will be invited to share their ideas around the campfire and will be given a book voucher.

More details:

If submitting a video or audio recording, ensure that you are sharing a link to a video in the public domain and that you have permission to share all recordings. Entrants must be 15-24 years old. Book vouchers will be awarded to people who can attend the event. Written entries should be no more than 200 words and can be shared in any format. Winners will be informed on 21st August. This competition is being run by ‘Science for All’ and prizes are funded by public donations. Please contact us if you have any questions.

With financial support from

Contact details:
info@scienceforall.world
campfiresandscience

campfiresandscience

@campfirescience

ScienceforAll.World